

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A waxer for automobiles includes an upper having a top provided with a switch for controlling power to the waxer, a lower edge of the upper cover being provided with a plurality of hooks, a seat on which is mounted the upper cover, with the hooks engaged with respective recesses of the seat, the seat being formed with a cavity, rechargeable batteries arranged in the cavity, an electric motor disposed within the cavity and electrically connected with the rechargeable batteries and the switch, a base on which is mounted the seat, the base being formed with a circular chamber at a central portion thereof and four tubular portions at four corners thereof, an eccentric block disposed within the circular chamber and eccentrically affixed on an output axle of the electric motor, a sponge affixed to a bottom of the base, and a cover enclosing the sponge.